The Ohio Democrats declare that their party is in favor of "honest reform in the civil service." The Democrats have made too many vote-catching platforms to succeed. The game won't work in Ohio or anywhere else this year.

The President confesses that the River and Harbor bill is fall of abominations. but thinks he will have to sign it on necount of the appropriations attached to it. That is precisely the way Ben Butler eaught President Grant on the salary grab bill. But Presidents should not allow themselves to be caught by the tileks of Congressmen.

The Philadelphia Times which is here and there and almost everywhere in politic, says the Republican people in Penusylvania are iffe for revolution; and it says that if John Stewarl, the Independ. of immigrants to this country, farnishes ent Republican candidate was to be yetod for to-day, he would receive 10 5000 votes, and three months hence he will have 250,000. It is very easy to elect men on paper, but the reclifies of the ballot box frequently makes disestrons work of speculation.

West Point is to have another colored cadet which means more trouble to that National academy. His name is Livingston, and he will be nominated by Congressman Disbee, of Florida. He far surpassed all his white competitors in the examination. When it is remembered how Clarke, Whittaker and Flipper fared while at West Point, there is not much encouragement to hope that trouble will be avoided by the admission of Livingston. One of the chief glories of the Declaration of Independence is not taught at West Point, and never has been.

When the Ohio Democrats declared for protection, the Des Moines Leader, Democratic, said: "They are bound to break up the Democratic party. No party can live on so bald an absurdity and so wicked a humbag?' Protection will be the issue in 1881, and as that is high above all other issues, the Democrats are beginning to trim and steal Republican thunder. It is the issue that will wir, because it is a righteous issue, and has been advocated by the Republican party ever since the Republican party was born. The Democrats, a party, have continually denounced protection to American radiustry, and thereby upholding the British theory of free Irade. But some Democrats begin to see that protection is not only treading down the Democratic party, but they see that it is justice, and they therefore begin to hedge. While Democrats are wrangling among themselves on the tariff question, the Repubheans will move along in the even tenor of their way, and will carry the North in

Since the startling fact has been published that Congress has appropriated $100,000,000 for pensions this year, there is a demand for the publication of the list of pensioners of the United States. Such a list has never been published, and it would do good. But there are some objections on the ground that it would subject the soldiers to the "mortification" of having their names published as peusioners. A man who served his country well during the war, and lost a limb or became enfeebled by disease, should not be ashamed to have his name appear on the rolls as a pensioner. He is glad to get the money, and if he gets it honestly, he should not consider it a STAR SPANGLED BANNER. mortification to have the world know that once he was wounded or broken down in health while combatting rebellion, and now the government is in part compen-

the appropriation to the appalling amount of $100,000,000, are thousands who are not entitled to pensions. This is one reason why many object to the publication of the list. It would in part expose a fraud and they don't want the fraud exposed. It is a notorious fact that thousands of people are drawing pensions upon manufactured claims, while others who did receive disabling injuries in the service are getting nothing. The publication and proper distribution of the roll of pensioners would stop all this.

It has been said and said with a good deal of force, that the pension roll should be a roll of honor. "It should be carefully compiled and printed, and copies of the list for each State should be placed on file at every State capitol, and the list for each county in the office of the county courts, so that they should be accessible for public examination. In this way repetitions, impersonations and illegal claims of every kind would be detected. the impostors exposed and the names of the heroic soldiers who suffered for their country and have received the country's grateful acknowledgment in return would be preserved to fame."

A WHISKY TRAGEDY.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 39,-At a late hour last night Edward Thalor and Frederick Glazer, got into a foolish altereation in a saloon in the southwestern part of the city, resulting in a fist fight. The men were separated, and one put out one door and the other another. Thaler, being somewhat bloody, went toward a spring in the neighborhood to wash, and on his way encountered Glazer, who shot him in the head, causing instant death. Accounts of the shooting are conflicting. One witness testified at the inquest that Thaler did not see Glazer till the latter stepped up to him, saying, with an oath. "You are following me, are you?" placing the revolver muzzle against his neck and firing, the bulles coming out at the top of his head. Another stated that Thaler assaulted Glazer, who shot in selfdefense. Glazer delivered humself into custody and stands committed for trial. Deceased was a railroad brakeman, 25 years old, and unmarried. Glazer is 44, and was employed in a wholesale clothing establishment.

AN UNLUCKY DOCTOR.

Plano, Ill., July 30.—Dr. F. L. Lord's door-bell rang about 12 o'clock last night. He naturally responded at once. Upon opening the door he was met by two straugers. They informed him that a patient of his near Yorkville was worse, and to buston to the hedside. When the doctor got out of the town a mile, although it was a delightful moonlight night, nearly as light as day, he was confronted by two masked mon. They pointand cocked revolvers at his head and demanded him to stop. He obeyed. He was then induced through the same gentle persuasion to dismount. The villains then tred him to a fence and rilled his pockets, capturing 35 cents in cash and a $75 gold watch. The two men then drove off at a break-neck speed, one in the dector's buggy, the other in a vehicle of the own. The suffering victim soon broke the fetters and walked home, finding his horse tied to a neighbor's fence. He expected to find that his store had been en-

Trip into the Rocky Mountains. NO. SEVEN.

Twenty mules to the southwest of Las Vegas, the road passes a small Mexican village of adobe houses, near which Bernal Peak, soveral handred feet high, rises with abrupt sides from the broken plain. Its level top, containing twenty-five acres, is reached by only one path, which 1s difficult to ascend. Some years since, the Navajo Indians attacked the inhabitants of this village and drove them to take refuge on this mountain, where they could successfully defend themselves against the foe, numbering about four hundred warriors. In return, the latter prevented these prisoners from escaping and deliberatory held them in their lofty retreat until they all perished from hunger and thirst. From this tragic event the Peak is called Starvation Book. The spot is marked by a cross, which, is plainly seen from the railroad train.

A short distance beyond, the track runs m sight of the raips of the ancient pucblo of the Pecos Indians. It is situated on quite a small plain, which appears to be surrounded almost entirely by ligh hills, forming an immense ampitheater. In this region, there is no other place more justly celebrated. The crumbling walls of a Cathedral, said to be creeted in 1628 by the Franciscan Monks, stand on a slight eminence near a clear and swift running stream and in the midst of this plain. The building was constructed in the form of a Roman cross, 118 feet in length and 45 in width at the transcept. On the square cedar beams which supported the flat mud roof were engraved enrious designs, symbolizing heathen rather than Christian ideas. Close by this was the stone-built structure, nearly 1,500 feet in circuit, five stones high, and containing 500 rooms, which formed the main portion of the Pecos village. This is regarded as the far-gest ancient edifice constructed of stone, in the United States; and it undoubtedly housed at one time several thousand of the former inhabitants. The remains of a thick wall are found surbunding the inclosure on which this building stands. Tradition assigns this spot as the birth-place of Montezuma, the culture-god of the Aztec people. It is represented that his mother was a virgin, and that he was trained to care for the ilocks. On reaching maturity, he exhibited wonderful supernatural powers, and gained extraordinary influence over the many Pueblos in this section. He established a system of sun-worship, and con-nected with it the sacred fire—which was kept burning in a room of the large stone edifice of his village, for centuries until about forty years ago. This was done in obedience to his command, and in expectation of his return to the place. Hosts of warriors perished in watching the fire for days and nights without food or rest, during the lapse of these many years. At last, the members of this village be-

McHonry in 1812 Mrs. Sanderson, who ered at a certain time, many of his nation, and led them in a journey south-ward. He rode on the back of an engle, which had often appeared to him while busy at his occupation near his native village. Wherever he stopped at night, there he planted an Indian pueblo, several of which are now visited in the valley of the Rio Grande. The location of the capital of the Aztec people, which he founded, was to be designated by the "alighting of the cagle upon a eactus bush and devouring a scrpent." This prophesy was falfilled when the procession arrived at the present site of the City of Mexico. The legend places this event as occurring at least 550 years since; and the alighting of the eagle is memoralized in the designs of the present coin and the national seal of the Mexican Republic.

In several points on the road in this region, fine views are obtained of the Sierra Madre range, which has at some distance in the west, across the Rio Grande. The peaks, though not so high as those in the first range of the Rockies, along which we have traveled over two hundred miles, are covered with snow, and appear to be separated wider apart. The scenery here is less grand in appearance, but is more varied, than that seen farther to the north. Thick groves of pine and cedur restle along in the valleys, and extend in patches up the sides of the low mountains. Sharply defined gulches run down between the foot-bills in many places. Some of the glumpses here caught of the green value and regged greeks of adjacent neurons. vales and rugged crests of adjacent mountains are exceedingly charming.

A ride of a few miles to the west brought us to the famous battle field of Gloriotta, where the Umon and the Confederate troops fought a decisive engagement in the spring of 1862. This occurred in the Apache Canon, toward its eastern end. An intelligent gentleman, also as a private in the northern forces, participated in the battle, pointed out to me the places of chief interest on the ground, and described many incidents in the hotly contested and prolonged encounter. I saw the low ridge besides the trail, on which our army planted their cannon and here offectually checked the victorious march of the southern soldiers; the winding stream along whose banks the companies of brave men on both sides were stationed, and numbers of them were slain; the Mesa which a detachment of our troops climbed during the fight, and descended in a hidden path to the rear of the rebelarmy; and the narrow defile in which these troops attacked the transportation train of the army, and destroyed their wagons, 200 in number, containing all their pre-visions. I subsequently met, in the low-er portion of New Mexico, a most enter-prising citizen who, as a Confederate officer, had on the day of the engagement, the charge of the companies culisted from the German settlers in Texas, whose duty it was to protect the train. He described the action of these men in refusing to guard the provisions, and in rushing for-ward into the field ploughed with our connon shot; and thus negligently supplied the opportunity for the fortunate turn in the battle. The invading army, learning of their irretrievable loss, retreated toward Texas, and suffered untold hardships from hunger before they could reach their base of supplies hundreds of miles distant.

Southwest of Sauta Fc, about twenty miles, are located the mimes of the Cerril-los district. Here hundreds of clams have been made, and portions of them are just now worked with only promise are just now worked with only promise of moderate yield of silver, a little gold, and considerable lead. Thus far, quite a large amount of capital has been invested in the development of the mines, and some of the companies interested are very hopeful of fluding rich years of silver. This section is hilly, rather than nountainous. The presence of valuable area was known continues ago by the naores was known centuries ago by the native Indians and the adventurous Spaniards. Many pits were dug by them, particularly by the latter, and rough furnaces were creeting for smelting the silver ore. Some of these pits have recently been reopened, and in them are found the large stone hammers, used in breaking up the hard granite and trap rocks, and the rotten trunks of trees which, with the not-ches cut in them, served for ladders Here is also the famous everflow of white perpheny in a single hill about 300 feet high, in which is found the mineral turquoise in its utmost perfection. Jewels made from it are in the crown of the king of Spain. The value of a specimen of the sky bine variety far surpasses that of gold of the same weight. A sufficient amount of broken stone was carried out of the mine on the shoulders of the Tu-dian slaves under their Spanish rulers, to cover twenty acres of ground, several feet deep. The refusal of some inhabitants of an Indian pueblo in the neighborhood to work in a pit of this turquoise hill where twenty-five of their number had been erashed to death by the falling rock ed to the revolution of 1680, in which all the Spaniards in the territory were either slam or driven back into Mexico. The Catholic priest shared the same fate with the cruel task-master. Afterwards, a compromise was effected on the basis that the invaders should never again operate in the mines of the country occu-pied by these Indian tribes.

While rambling among the camps near the Corrillos mines, I ascended one of the highest hills, and enjoyed a view which embraced a range in all directions truly magnificent. The houses of Santa Fe, situated in a slight depression of the ground, are distinctly visible. The two Placias mountains, abounding in gold, lie to the southeast in the immediate vicinity. The wide valley of the Rio Grande, then full of water, stretches in a long distance away to the south. The bold termination of the Spanish range, the first series crossed in the journey, is presented to the northeast. The bright, snowy peaks of mountains, 175 miles to the north, rise just above the horizon; and the dark, leaden-colored Ladrone mountains, 150 miles to the southwest, and the southwest of the southwest. rest heavily against the blue sky. Indelibly impressed upon the mind is the surpassing grandeur of the scene, as well as the insignificance of a human being placed in the midst of it.

An Æsthetic Influence. "Yes, sir," he said; "my grandfather was a very peculiar man. He was extremely sensitive to influences that do not generally affect other men. His peculiarity was that his temperament changed according to the hat he wore.

And he wore all kinds of lats."

"He must have been a good many varieties of one man," said the listener.

"He was. Now, for instance, when he wore a Derby hat he was merely com-morplace. He behaved himself like an ordinary man, and had no special characteristics—nothing calculated to attract the attention of a bull-dog, I if may so express it,"
"Well, there's nothing peculiar about that,"

"No; but just listen: When he put on a slouch hat, his character changed entirely. He became raffianly and des-perate, and swaggered around like a hired brave or an advance agent out of a job. His best friends were afraid of him, and he had only to put his som-brero on to keep away the most energetic bill collector."

"If I were like that, I'd have a felt hat riveted to my head," said the other man.

"Then when he put on a cap, with a vizor, he became simply low. He used to hang around har-rooms, although he was a strict temperance man, and he can entire the car conductors and states-

"So long as he didn't associate with poets, it was all right."

"He never got so low as that. But you ought have seen him when he put a silk hat on. The moment he appeared on the street in a beaver, he tooked so representable, that recode used to come up. respectable that people used to come up to him and ask him to accept the chairmanship of mass meetings or to serve as director of charitable associations, and on one occasion he was actually arrested on one occasion he was actually arrested on suspicion of being a bank president."
"How is it," inquired the other man, doubtfully, "that we have never heard of your grandfather?"
"He died young. The way it happened was this: He once went out in a silk hat, and a man came along who mis-took him for the receiver of a savings bank who had received all that was left of the unfortunate depositors' money after the smash-up. This man struck him on the head, and broke down the hat. It then resembled the discouragedlooking tile always worn by the inebri-ates on the stage. True to his peculiar-ity, my grandfather at once became profoundly intoxicated, although, as I have said, he never had drunk a drop in his and he died in fifteen minutes of delirium tremens."

"Let us adjourn to the nearest bak ery," said the other man; "and I will purchase the establishment for you."

A Sketch of Solon.

He was a native of Athens, having been born about 638 before Christ, and belonged to one of the most distinguished families of Attica. In early life he was engaged in trade, and visited many parts of Greece and Asia as a traveling merchant, and gained distinc-tion by his poems, and for his political wisdom was reckoned one of the soven sages. He began his political career by recovering Salamis from the Megarians. The Athenians were tired with a tedious and difficult war that they conducted against the Megarians for the Island of Salamis, and made a law that it should be death for any man, by writing or speaking, to assert that the city ought coreover it. Solon felt the disgrace, and perceived that thousands of youth and perceived that thousands of youth wished for somebody to begin, but did not dare to stir first for fear of the law. He counterfeited a distraction, and by his own family it was spread about the city that he was mad. Then he secretly composed a short poem and, commit ting it to memory, went to the market place, and as the people gathered about him, he got up on the 'ald's stand and sang the cleay. His friends commended it, and especially Pisistratus exhorted the citizens to obey his directions; then the law was recinded, and war was renewed under the leadership of Solon, with successful results. In 594 Solon was chosen archion or chief magistrate of Athens, and enjoyed to the full the confidence of the Athenians. The constitution of Solon, which made property instead of birth the title of citizenship, and which was the prolude to the subsequent democracy, was by a solemn oath of government and people, declared valid without alteration for ten years. He obtained leave of absence for that period, visited Egypt and Cyprus, and returned to Athens prior to the first usurpation of Pisistratus, and amid violent dissensions was respected by all parties, but was unable to overrule the popular favor of his kinsman. As will be at once apparent, we are unable to go into the subject of Solon's laws, but advise the interested reader to read Plutarch's "Lives."—Chicago Inter-

The outer covering, instead of being hard and brittle like a shell, was so soft that it could be easily indented by the finger. The python is sixting upon a nest full of such eggs, and in a short time a lot of little snakes will be hatched out. They will be nice pets for people who have an admiration for reptiles. The mother snake is twenty-five feet in length, and she is coiled upon her nest and patiently awaiting the advent of her young. Her temper is just like that of a setting hen. She is very ugly, and if she is disturbed sho manifests her displeasure in a way that gives all needders to understand that he wishes to label the research. that she wishes to be let severely alone.

"What shall I do with this thing?" was the inquiry made by the representative of the Star, to whom the python's egg was handed.

You can have it hatched artificial-

Mr. W. A. Coulding Superintendent

Mr. W. A. Coukling, Superintendent of the Central Park Menagerie, speak-ing of reptiles, said: "There is scarcely any animal that commands so much aversion as the serpent, and yet, in spite of this, it is one of the most interesting of all that come before the naturalist. Yet little attention has been paid to the snake, as compared to others of the animal kingdom. The ancient writers speak in respectful tones of ser-pents of size and power. Aristotle tells of the immense Lybian serpents, so large that they pursued and upset some of the voyagers' bouts that visited that coast. The story of the gigantic snake that threw the army of Regulus into disorder by killing and devouring several of hissoldiers, and squeezing a few hundred to death in his folds, will be remembered. Regulus finally killed the monster by aid of the engines used to assail fortified places. The skin of this python was 120 feet in length, and for years adorned one the temples of Rome."

Mr. Conkling added: "The story that snakes cover their prey with saliva is an error. Sir Robert Ker Porter says the python does not first cover its prey with saliva. The mucous does not pour out of the glands unless the prey is large and it is required to lubricate the jaws and throat for the seemingly dispropor-tionate feast. Pythons will cling by the tail to some tree growing in the water, and then float upon the surface and wait for animals that may come to the water to quench their thirst. They often feed upon each other. In the Zoological Gardens in London, one who had lived for years on friendly terms with a brother nearly as large as himself, was found one morning sole tenant of his den. As the cage was secure, the keep-er was puzzled to know how the serpent had escaped. At last it was discovered that the remaining inmate had swollen remarkably during the night, when the truth came out. But if you want a good up and down snake story, let me introduce you to Prof. Hutchings."

"Can I tell you anything about snakes? I should say so," said the Rev. Mr. Hutchings, lightning enteulator and lecturer upon Bunnell's wonders. "Sir! I could tell you facts, sir—facts in relation to the betrayer of our common mother that would overwhelm you with amazement. I remember one in the year 1864. I was at Gilbert's Museum, Market, near Second, San Francisco, Market, near Second, san Etancisco, Cal. Fifty in gold and all expenses. Those were glorious days; gold way up, and myself generally in a like condi-tion. I noticed for several days a man they called Reynolds hanging about the place. He was a man about fifty, no taller than myself, gray locks hanging over his shoulders. A bent form like a tree that had been brought up wrong. Eyes with a far-away look. He had a peculiar gliding motion, and his feet, inulled in slippers, gave forth no more sound than the reptile. Shortly after I noticed the proprietor advertised for snakes. One day a mountaineer came in with a box pierced with air-holes. From the inside came a sound like unto the rattle of musketry.

What yer got, stranger? said Reynolds, pushing through the crowd.

"Rattlers, said the mountaineer "'Let me take one,' said Reynolds, reaching for the box.

"Better look out; they bite, and when they bite they kill,' was the roply. "'If yer brought these in answer to the advertisement them's my snakes,' said Reynolds, as he plunged his hand

THE GAZETTE into the box. In a second he brought forth a six-foot rattlesnake, and holding it between a thumb and finger looked at The far-away look in the eyes of the mysterious man had given way to a dancing, sparkling brilliancy, before which the snake was powerless.

4 Ain't be purty? See the sun strike its handsome hide and cam back in rain-how colors. Kiss me, boy.

Slowly the deadly screent went towards his mouth, and then darted down his throat. The crowd did not move; they scarcely breathed. I feit my hair rising; I might say, in New Haven slang: "We were paralyzed." At all events. we were rooted to the spot as firmly as the Pyramids are to Egypt's sand. In an instant his hands were in the box, and no less than twenty of these deadly animals were dancing around him to the music of their ratiles. The mountaineer was pale as a sheet, and trembled aineer was pate as a sheet, and trembled as with the ague. Back went the snakes into the box. Turning to the mountaineer, Reynolds exclaimed: 'What's the matter; are ye cold?' His voice broke the spell; the mountaineer gave one look, and then made for the door, He never came for pay for those snakes."

Among the visitors to see the enormous 500-pound python on exhibition there was a untive of Central America. He told the attendant at thedoor that a The tool the attenuant at the nor rhabat long residence in a warm climate had made him perfectly familiar with reptiles and their habits. He acknowledged that the pytion in the museum was a wonderful serpent, but he said he had seen many such in Guatennia. A representative of the Star, who happened to come along just then and overheard the Central American's remarks, asked him to relate some of his experiences with snakes. The man was a veteran of sixty-live or seventy years. His face was bronzed, and his hair, which he were long, was as straight as that of an Indian. He was full six feet tall, and the lankness of his figure gave him a singular appearance. He told the reporter that his name was Sener Jose Dece, that he was born in Mexico, an Heft that country for Central America when a young man. The Senor was well educated, and is able to speak in the English language with the same fluency that he does in his native tongue. He said:

thickets, and slept with pythons and anacondas crawling all about me. I never thought of being atraid of them. The stories told in books of immerse snakes attacking large animals and men, coiling about them, and crushing and swallowing their prey, are for the most part exaggerations. It is true that small animals are often killed and swallowed whole by anaeoudas and bon-constrictors; but it is safe to say that no full-grown man was ever made a meal of by a serpent."

"Were you ever allacked by a serpont?" the reporter asked.
"I never had one tackle me, but a sailor with whom I was acquainted had a pretty severe experience. He was walking in a thicket on one moonlight night, twenty-live or thirty years ago, when he suddenly found himself encir-eled with the folds of a tremendous snake. I suppose he would have drawn a knife from his pocket and cut the reptile in two, but unfortunately for him he did not happen to have any cutting instrument with him at the time. So all that was left for him to do was to struggle and free himself the best way he could. He made a desperate effort and loosened himself from what was a very close embrace. Once free, he procured a stick and pounded the anaconda upon its head until it was dead. There is a certain spot at the base of a snake's head which, if struck even a slight blow, will cause death."

"Is an anaconda good for human food?"

"Now, that is a question which is very hard to answer. It may be wholesome, but I think it would be pretty tough eating for any human being who has an ordinary set of teeth and the average digestion. I think I would prefer good beefsteak or a tenderloin if I wanted a good square menl."

"Is any kind of snake suitable for "O, yes; rattlesnakes are delicious tries where they formed a large share of the regular diet of the inhabitants."

"To what countries do you refer?"

"Well, sir, the people of Brazil and Chili cat rattlesnakes: but you need not go so far away from New York to find serpent-caters. The folks down in the northern part of the State of Pennsyl-yania cat rattlesnakes. The serpents in that State are particularly plump, and exceedingly inviting to the palate of an opicure. According to the orthodox method, the rattler is skinned and cut up into pieces about an inch or an inch and a haif long, and then fried the same are transferred. There same as you would cook an eel. I have eaten rattlers lots of times. They taste something like cels, only a great deal sweeter. I prefer rattlesmkes to fregs any day in the week. Fregs are in-

"Did you ever see a pyramid of snakes? "If you mean one of those conical piles of roptiles, such as Livingston saw in Africa, I will tell you that I never saw a pyramid; but I have seen a heap or big knots of serpents all twisted and entertwined in a wriggling, squirming, slimy, hissing banch. I was exploring a cave in South America a few years ago, when I came to a passage that was so low and narrow that I was compelled to get down and crawl upon my hands and knees. I had to hold my torch in my teeth, and, as I could not manage it very well, my light was extinguished, and my only alternative was to grope along in darkness. Suddenly I felt something cold and slimy against my hands. I knew from the feeling that I had touched a snake. Then I blindly put my hands forward and thrust them into a nest of screents. You can be-lieve that I got out of that place as speedily as possible."—N. Y. Star.

-The agent of an accident insurance company introduces in his advertisement the picture of a hat with the blade of a pair of shears, that fell out of a window, sticking upright in the hat. He says that the wearer of this hat was insured against accidents in the company for which he is an agent; but how that prevented the shears from falling into his hat the agent fails to show. Moreover it was the height of the hat that prevented the shears from hurting the wearer of the hat after they struck. A society to prevent women and children from chucking shears out of upper windows, or one for the encouragement of high hats, would seem to be the real need of the community. - Detroit Free

-The anti-asthetic, all-but-poetic man of the Denver Tribane does exceedingly dislike O. —Newport News, the deep water terminus of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, has only recently been laid off. but in less than two years it will be a flourishing town, and in ten years a paper predicts for it 15,000 or 20,000 population. The principal improvements thus far have been made by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway.

—There is a tree in Chester, N. H., the circumference of the trunk being seventeen feet, and the distance from the ends of the limbs on one side to those on the other is ninety feet. The trunk is hollow. The tree was planted in 1812, on the Fourth of July, by Dr. West. It was cut by him for a walking-stick, and on reaching home he stuck it into the ground in front of the door.

- The lay crop of Maine in 1880 was worth about three times as much as all the other field crops of that year. It was, according to the statistics published in the annual report of the Department of Agriculture, worth $16,-436,700, while the corn crop was worth only $853,175; the wheat crop $780,870; rye $37807; outs $966,156; barley $ 188. 655; buckwheat $210,000, and the potato erop $2,474,011, making a total of $5,540,654 as the value of all the field crops excepting hay.

Georgia has a mine of wealth far greater in value than her gold fields in her timber growth, if she only utilizes it properly. Seventeen thousand million feet of timber at the present market value, on shipboard at any of our ports, would represent a capital of $350,000,-000, and certainly, if the lumber inter-est (which has advanced nearly 100 per cent, in value in the last few years, while lumber has advanced only 50 per cent. during the same time) is worth an equal amount, this would make the total value of these two great sources of wealth $700,000,000, which sam far exconds the total valuation put upon all the property of every kind in the State. Stil. we venture to say, that in the list of our taxable property the lumber interest is almost the smallest in valuation. -Atlante (Ga.) News.

WIT AND WISDOM.

-- The best way to shorten sale is to stop advertising.

-- A sensational report is called a canand because one canardly believe it. -It is reported that a New Jerse cigar maker has discovered that the leaf of the tobacco plant makes a very good eigar.—Norristown Herald.

-The Oil City Blizzand says "beads" are the fashionable style of triuming "on a glass of beer." A "glass of beer," we presume, is a new article of feminine wear. The ladies do have such queer names for their fixings. -- Norristown Herald.

-The United States Fish Commission has recently placed in the rivers of Arkansas and Texas 1,500,000 shad. This statement may be believed. It's not the number of fish they put into a river, but the number they take out, that men lie about. -- Boston Post.

-A Denver Chinaman, who has gone into the ice cream business recently has the following sign near the door: "You catch 'em heezy belly two bittee all same Slan Flancisco." It is more and more evident that we are ruined by Chinese cheap labor. -- Boomerang.

-Philadelphia has a professional man who affixes celluliod noses with patent suction springs; reproduces lost cars; provides aluminium, gutta-percha or celluloid cheeks; reduces protruding laws; permanently cures facial reduces; practices plastic surgery in all its branches; and thoroughly disguises the ravages of time, disease and accident. Oh, would that he were here to put a whole hend on a friend of ours. -- Chicago Herald.

-An enterprising looking country-man with a creek full of tine brook trout was standing in the doorway of a rail-road station. A passenger accested him and admiring the fish remarked: "Going to take them home for supper, I suppose?" "Not if I can help it," said the rustic, with a grin. "There he a party of city bloods as went fishing from bere this mornin. They're 'spected back soon, and I'm sorter lyin' round waitin' to save their feelin's."—Brooklan Krate.

English Raspberry Jam.

A grocer, named John Acca, of Westminster, was summoned yesterday for selling, to the prejudice of the parchaser, an article of food, to-wit: Jam, which was not of the nature, substance and quality demanded. The article which was sold by the defendant as 'raspberry' jam was analyzed by Dr. Dupre, whose certificate read as follows: "The jam contains no raspberries at all, but chiefly consists of a mixture of gooseberries, black currants, etc., with the addition of some seeds, not identified, and colored by resanine (one of the coaltar colors.) The seeds and coloring matter are added to give the mixture the appearance of the genuine article, and the presence of the coloring matter in an article of food is highly objectionable, and may occasionally be injurious to health." A fine of twenty shillings and costs was imposed upon the defendant. Another grocer, named Levy, met with the same punishment for a similar offense.—Pall Mall Gazette. MISCELLANEOUS

NATURE'S WELL-BORER.

For years the water question has been a communicum on the plains of Arizona and Southern California. It is well known that some of the land on the desorts is of the best quality and would produce the best crops in the world if rain would fall or water were plentiful enough for irrigation. This problem has been solved by a South American gentleman who has traveled over the most of the world. of the world. While in this city a Times reporter, learning through a third party that he had made a discovery, called upon him and gathered the following facts: It seems that the gentleman was traveling in a dry part of South America from water and was beginning to get used up when he discovered one of those green spots on the desert that makes the lonely traveler's heart feel light. On nearer approach he saw that there was a nearer approach he saw that there was a town of small animals similar to the prairie dog of this country. They had mounds all around the green spot and seemed to be very numerous. When he rode up among them time all scampered into their holes, but a me came out again and became quite tame. He rode up to the spring or well and found it to be an excellent quality of water. After quenching his thirst he began to look around, and investigate the new came. around and investigate the new camp. The strangest thing that his attention was called to was the similarity of the holes made by the dogs. The spring flowed from the entrance of the mound just the same as that in which the dogs lived, but it was much larger, and on the top was a large basin. Noticing this fact and knowing that water was a great distance, he began an investiga-tion and came to the conclusion that the

They worked very rapidly and soon had a hole fifty or sixty feet deep. They seemed to be able to penetrate the hardest kind of soil, as they kept right on, stopping for nothing. One would work in the bottom of the hole while the other brought the dirt to the top. On the fifth day they seemed to be exhausted and he gave them some water. This stopped work for several days, but they soon got thirsty and went to work as hard as ever. On the morning of the eighteenth day they both came up with a rush, followed by a stream of water. eighteenth day they both came up with a rush, followed by a stream of water.

A Tramp's Philosophy.

In the hip pocket of an old vagrant was a memorandum book full of his own writing with a pencil, and some of his philosophy is good enough to be preserved. His first paragraph reads:

"Drinking bad whisky because it is offered free is like getting in the way of bullets purchased by an enemy."

A second reads:
"Honesty is the best policy, but some folks are satisfied with the second best. It is hard to be honest on an empty

"A dry plank under a rain-roof shed is better than a feather-bed in jalk and one isn't annoyed by the jailer bringing in a square breakfast."

A fourth says:
"Pay as you go. If you havon't anything to pay with, don't go. If you are forced to go, record every indebtedness and let your heirs settle the bills."

The fifth explains: "We should have charity for all. When winter winds blow cold and drear we wags should pity the poor follows in India who are having red-hot weather."

A sixth is recorded:
"Politeness costs nothing, but it is not expected that you will wake a man up at expected that you will wake a man up at midnight to ask permission to go through his hen-house. It is more courteous to let him onjoy his needed repose."

The seventh and last we noted down as follows: "When you pick up an apple core do not find fault because it is not the apple tremaining years of an old man, here is my hand." But for this marriage it is very uncertain whether he would have undertaken his laborious task at Panama. She is always at his side, and has been his chief help and support throughout his ardnous conflicts with politicians, a oney-lenders, engineers and laborors.

"When you pick up an apple core do not find fault because it is not the apple to teself, but be satisfied with the grade of doscent. Do not be ashamed of your occupation. We can not all be lords, nor can we all be vagrants. As I can not be a lord, I should not lament at being a vagrant. Be truthful and outspoken—that is, tell them you are a Chicago fire sufferer. Keep seasonable hours, or some other vag will get your plank first. Be hepeful, cheerful, and good-natured. Growling won't cure a sore heel."—Philadelphia Temes.

A PLEASURE PARTY.

Off to Camp on the Shores of Lake Delavan.

A lively scene was presented this morning at the corner of Main and Milwankee streets, where quite a number of gentlemen were congregated, a few of them busily engaged in loading wagons with all imaginable things, tents, cots, stools, bodding, cooking utensils and all the paranhernalia for a camping expedition. Every conceivable article which might be conducive, to comfort, or amusement could be found in this incongruous assortment of pic-nic accontrements, and merry laughter was indulged in by the prospective participants, as some special article provoked a joke. Occasionally a few of the Indies who were to join the expedition, would put in an appearance and leut their taste and judgement to the indiscriminate stowing and packing which was going on. A little after 11 m. 74 above. o'clock the glad aunouncement was made that all was completed and the party left in carriages for the recreative point.

The shores of Lake Delayan have been selected by the pleasure party for their tionary or lower temperature and [presscamping ground, and they will spend a ure. week there, free from the conventionalities of society life, with but one controlling thought and impulse-how to enjoy themselves. If any party can experience pleasure in ruralizing "far from the madding crowd" where everything possible is in their favor, the excursionists will certainly reap a glorious harvest of amusement during their jolly camp life. The party is composed of: Mrs. Horace McEiroy, Conger McEiroy, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Davies, Ida and Allie Davies, Mrs. David Watt, Miss Hattie Dearboru, Miss Belle Rolston, Miss Maude Palmer, and Messrs. Will E. Evenson, Fred Hastings, Al. Kavelege, Struck by as Engine.

A serious accident, which very narrowly escaped being fatal, occurred this morning at the depot. A young girl named Katie Gavin, was crossing with a companion from the platform of the C. M. & St. P. road to the Northwestern side of the depot, on her way to work at the cotton mill, and were walking on the plank covered ties, when sho was struck by a switch engine of the Northwestern road. The blow caught her on the side, and her dress becoming ontangled, she was dragged a short distance. The engine was immediately stopped, and the girl picked up and taken to her residence on Washington street. Dr. Patmer was called in and examined her. The sole of her shoe saved one or her feet, as it was jerked off by one of the wheels. Her percetpible injuries are only slight, but it is feared that the accident may yet have a fatal result, as there are evidences of internal hemmor-

Bitten by a Wolf.

The she-wolf kept by Mr. James Worthington, displayed her veracious instincts yesterday afternoon by biting a little boy named Thomas Enright. Mr. Worthington keeps the animal chained in the rear of his premises, and as the boy was running by, she jamped at him, catching him on the right leg, and bit him quite badly. The boy was taken to Dr. Palmer's office, where the wound, an open cut of about an inch in length and a quarter of an inch in depth, was sewn up. No serious effect will result from the bite, but it should teach the boys a lesson, and keep them from approaching too near welves, however tame they may appear. The blame of the occurrence is attached to Hank Doty, who was jersing at the chain of the wolf and occasionally kicking her, until she became somewhat augered and sprang upon the boy who was playing tag in the alley. The wound had the appearance more of an incision made by a scretch of the animal's claws, than a bite.

Yesterday's Excursion.

The excursion to Racine yesterday proved quite a success, as all who went on it, were well pleased. A little over octation of the excursionists, and after a most enjoyable day, the return home was made, the train leaving Reeme at 7 o'clock and reaching here a little after 10 at night. If the race is fixed it will occur on the Chicago track, and most likely Budd Doble will drive Jay Eye See. It is rumored that Robert Bonner has offered $20,000 for this wonderful colt. This will probably be the most interesting and exciting race, if it occurs, that ever took place in this country between such young horses .-Ravine Tournal.

A Presentation.

A very pleasant episode occurred at the meeting of W. H. Sargent Post No. 20, G. A. R. last Friday night. The Post presented Cammander S. C. Cobb, with a handsome badge of his office, as a testimonial of his services to the post and the appreciation of the members. Adjt. E. G. Harlow made the presentation in a nest and well chosen speech, to which Commander Cobb, [replied in fitting terms. The affair was concluded by the comrades singing the "Badge Ode."

Age of Animals. There is not a great deal known yet

of the age of animals, especially those that have not been domesticated. The following are a few of the many interesting points on the subject gleaned from the "American Cyclopedia: There is a belief among the East Indians that the elephant lives about 300 years, and instances are on record of the animal having been kept in captivity as long as 130 years, their age being unknown when they were first taken wild from the for-Camels live from forty to fifty years; horses average from twenty to thirty, oxen about twenty, sheep eight or nine, and dogs from twelve to four-teen years. It has been observed that, as general rule, the larger types of animals live longer than the smaller, in the vertebrated classes, quadrupeds, birds, reptiles and fishes. Some kinds of birds attain a great age; the swan has been known to live 100 years, and it is recorded that the raven has exceeded that age; birds of prey attain to great longovity, and the eagle has survived a century. Parrots have been known to live sixty and as long as eighty years. Pheasants and domestic poultry rarely exceed twelve and fifteen years. A tortoise was placed in the garden of the Archiepiscopal Palace of Lambeth in 1633, during the life of Archbishop Laud, and lived till 1753, when it perished by accident. Small batrachians, as the toad, are known to live about fifteen years. Fishes and animals that live in the water attain, in many instances, to a great age. The carp has been known to live 200 years. Common river trout have been confined in a well thirty and even fifty years. A pike that has been known to live in a pond ninety years; and Gesner rolates that in 1497 an enor mous pike was caught in a lake near Heilbronn, in Swabia, with a brass ring attached to it, recording that it was put in the lake in the year 1230; the ring is still preserved at Manuheim. The age of the whale is known by the size of and number of the laming of certain organs in the mouth, formed by a horney substance commonly called whalebone; these laminto increase yearly, and if the mode of computation be correct, they indicate in certain cases that the whole attains to an age of 400 years. Little is known of the age attained by animals of the lower types, such as articulata, mollusca, and radiata. That of insects has received some attention, and it has been remarked that though the first period of life, passed in the grab or caterpillar state, extends to several months, or even years, the great majority live but a few days or weeks after the metamorphis by which they attain to a more perfect form. The ephemera, when it leaves its grub-life in the water, and assumes a higher form and an orial existence, lives but a few hours, and dies the very day it was born into its new life.
